The statistics are sobering. Frustrated church members across Europe and North America are leaving their congregations. Why? Floyd McClung believes that God is realigning the church and wants to use people's frustration to motivate them toward change.

The kind of change McClung envisions may surprise you. It involves a valley of dry bones ready for use, ready to become an army. The dry bones are the poor, the rebellious, the marginalized of society, the young, the uneducated.

In this thought-provoking, timely book, McClung presents five principles of leadership, church, and mission sure to challenge all to become a radical community of Jesus followers: simple church, courageous leadership, focused obedience, apostolic passion, and disciple making.
