Representações do senado romano na Ab Urbe Condita Libri de Tito Lívio: livros 21-30 (Portuguese Edition) Marco Antonio Collares

O presente livro trata das representações de Tito Lívio, historiador romano de finais do século I a.C., sobre o senado de Roma. As representações enquanto referências simbólicas, valores, crenças e concepções de mundo de indivíduos historicamente posicionados são comumente projetadas em textos e artefatos culturais que pretendem auxiliar no estabelecimento de consensos e normas de conduta em dada sociedade. Nesse sentido, o livro enfoca às opiniões do autor romano, inscritas em sua Ab Urbe Condita Libri (Desde o Início da Cidade), sobre a mais influente instituição da República, aquela que mais precisou se adaptar à nova situação política do Principado, no momento em que o poder foi centralizado por Otávio Augusto, primeiro Príncipe-Imperador romano, sobrinho-neto e filho adotivo de Júlio César. A partir da constituição de uma narrativa histórica sobre a sociedade romana e suas instituições tradicionais, Tito Lívio estabeleceu normas de condutas para o senado imperial de sua própria época, vinculando-se indiretamente às políticas e às representações do primeiro Príncipe-Imperador romano em seu relacionamento direto com o conselho dos patres.
